Stamping out gender inequality: the battle against negative neuroscience

In her fascinating and occasionally humorous lecture entitled How the New Neurosexism Helps Sustain the Status Quo, Dr Cordelia Fine will show how stereotypes created in the name of science have influenced attitudes and behaviour in the workplace in self-fulfilling ways and how they still interfere with our trajectory towards real equality. Do not miss this revealing and intriguing examination of yet another subtle barrier to women's rightful equality. Dr Fine is currently an Associate Professor in the Centre for Ethical Leadership at the Melbourne Business School, University of Melbourne. The lectures commemorate and honour the significant contribution Dr Clare Burton made to gender equity and organisational change. Proceeds from this event are donated to the Clare Burton Memorial Scholarship Fund.
